Curriculum Vitae

Maria Koliopoulou has studied at the Department of German language and philology at the University of Athens (1998-2002). She received her Master's Degree in Contrastive Linguistics and Language Variation from the Patras University in Greece (2006). She continued her studies at the same University to earn a PhD degree in linguistics, specialising in Contrastive Morphology in German and Modern Greek (2013).

After completing her PhD studies, she had a research scholarship from DAAD (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst 'German Academic Exchange Service') and worked for a year as a postdoctoral researcher at the Bielefeld University in Germany (2013-2014).

Since 2014 she holds a post-doctoral position in the Department of Translation Studies at Innsbruck University. She currently teaches terminology management and terminography. Her main research interests include morphology and terminology. She has published, among others, in the Journal of Greek Linguistics, Italian Journal of Linguistics and Languages in Contrast.
