

Dr. Theodoros Katerinakis

Adjunct Faculty, Drexel University

E-mal: tkaterinakis@gmail.com

Curriculum Vitae

Theodoros Katerinakis was born in Chania, Crete, Greece and is an information analyst from the Dept of Informatics of Athens University of Economics and Business.

He attended postgraduate courses in National Nuclear Research Center 'Demokritos' and Technical University of Crete.

He was a partner in ministerial committees, researcher in RC-AUEB and Oracle Hellas, editor in conference proceedings and textbooks, and the author of three books. His research is published by Sage, Palgrave-McMillan, Routledge, LIT Verlag.

He has served as a computer analyst in Hellenic Air Force (during Imia crisis), in the "Greek Pentagon" and as Greek representative in the USN in Souda Bay, receiving USN citation letters.

He spent 10⁺ years as an organization/HR consultant and Head of the Electronic Document Management System in Bank of Chania.

His multidisciplinary activity covers the scope of societies like Greek Computer Society, Hellenic Society for Operational Research, ELETO, Hellenic Management Association, Planetary Society, AAAS, INSNA, ACA.

His research interests focus on aviation communication, linguistics, banking, human resources development and information theory. He holds an MSc in Communication Science (Drexel, 2009), a PhD in Aviation Communication (Drexel, 2014) and Adjunct Faculty for Greek Studies at Drexel University, in Philadelphia, USA. Webpage At:

http://www.drexel.edu/culturecomm/academics/graduate/phdCultureComm/alumni/Katerinakis_Theodore/